The Adventures of a Cockade man—His Blaze on the Street—A Post—He Calls on the President elect—Mr. Lincoln finds himself between two Fires—
A Last Yankee—The Southern is Presented with Lincoln's Speeches, etc.

SPRINGFIELD, Dec. 20, 1860.

As stated at the close of my last, the denizens of this town were thrown into quite a flutter of excitement in the course of yesterday morning, by the appearance on the streets of two Southern gentlemen, who were dressed in the blue emblems of disunion. Their cockades being the first seen in this latitude, which they fostered by subjecting themselves as much as possible to the public gaze. A crowd of boys soon gathered and kept at their heels, with a persistence worthy of a better cause. One of the representatives of seceding chivalry growing tired of being stared at like a wild beast took off his cockade and retired to his hotel. The other, however, continued blustering and swaggering from one group shop to another. In one of these institutions he found his match. A well known Republican, noticing his strutting and fretting, managed to engage in conversation with him, which soon turned to the all absorbing question of the day. The Republican asked the Southern what he meant by parading the cockade. "To designate myself as a disunionist, and a foe to the Black Republican party that wants to steal our niggers," was the reply. "Then you are a traitor," rejoined the Republican, and "furthermore I will bet you that you never owned a slave—do not pay any taxes—cannot call an inch of land your own." This proposition was of course made at a venture. But the Republican was right in his estimate of the Southern. His offer proved a complete poser. The cockade man confessed himself a nonseceder and straightway sought, like his companion, retirement at his hotel.

Nothing further was heard of the churl, until he loomed up of a sudden, in the afternoon, in Mr. Lincoln's reception room. His nerves were doubtless braced up by diverse doses of whisky for the daring feat of facing the "black republican" lion "in his den." But great as his mettle may have been before entering into the Presidential presence, it evidently left him as soon as he entered. Introducing himself as Mr. D. E. Ray, of Yazoo, Miss., he took his seat with all the meekness of a lamb, and "sat in silent expectation" for about twenty minutes—holding, however, his hat so that the object of his terror could not fail to observe the cockade. Insulting as the "eight must have proved to the President elect, he perceived at once of what stuff the man was made, and hence hardly appeared to notice him, but quietly continued his conversation with some other visitors. A Missourian, who happened to be present and seated near the Mississippi, at last directed his attention to the latter.

He asked him a number of questions in relation to the proposed secession of Mississippi. The sudden answers of the Southern struck the ear of a radical Republican Yankee, likewise in attendance on the same occasion. Waxing angry at the Mississippians' discussion sentiment, he inquired tauntingly of him: "Isn't that all gas?" Whereupon the President elect, evidently uneasy at the prospect of a violent altercation, interposed by joining in the conversation. In its course, the Southern asserted that the people of his State were not afraid of Mr. Lincoln, but the party that elected him. This latter apprehension was at once pronounced groundless by some of the visitors. One of them inquired of the cockade man "whether he had ever read Mr. Lincoln's debates with Senator Douglas." Being answered in the negative, he requested the former to furnish a copy to the fire-eater; the latter also expressing a desire for the book, the President elect procured, and having appropriately inscribed it on the title page, handed it to him remarking: "You will find that the only difference between you and me is, that I think slavery wrong, and you think it right; that I am opposed to its extension, while you advocate it; and that as to the security of the institution and the protection of slave property in the States where it has a lawful existence, you will find it as great under my administration as it ever was under that of Mr. Buchanan."

Mr. Lincoln also found occasion to state, "that if the Southern States concluded upon a contingent secession, that is, upon awaiting aggressive acts on the part of his administration, they would never go out of the Union." All of this the Southern received in unbroken silence. He was obviously at a perplexing loss what to say—His embarrassment finally made him so uncomfortable that he got up and tried to make his way out. Mr. Lincoln saw him to the door, shook hands with him, and told him playfully that he hoped the Southern people were not afraid of getting hurt by him. "No we ain't," was the reply.

Lewis Cass.
The Charleston Mercury, of the 19th, pays its respects to the venerable Lewis Cass, as follows:
"For the hoary-headed trickster, and humbug, who has just retired from the Cabinet because war is not made on South Carolina, we have only to say, that his present imbecility equals his past treachery to this section. Had he been ever absent from the President's councils his Administration might have been more successful."
"So we go. This same Lewis Cass, while American Minister to the French Court, electrified the world by his splendid manifesto against the attempt of the foreign Powers to place this country under their surveillance, on the pretext of interfering with the interests of slavery in the United States, and no where was it more rapturously applauded than in the Southern States, sensitive as these States have always been in regard to foreign aggressions. He fought with gallantry for his country during the late war, and during his connection with Mr. Buchanan's Administration steadily supported the policy of the Southern leaders." Struck down in 1848, simply and only because he was supposed to be too strongly committed to the policies of the South, he is now reviled and traduced as a "hoary-headed trickster and humbug." What next?

The Memphis Avalanche says a man named Splay, at Jackson, Miss., was arrested on the testimony of several negroes, on a charge of inciting slaves to insurrection. Splay was put in the calabos, but the mob broke into it and took the prisoner out, and that was the last seen of him. It is supposed he was hung and his body secreted.

A Valiant Sucker.
The editor of the Wheeling Intelligencer writes to that paper from Washington under date of December 10th:

An amusing scene, if anything can be said to be amusing here these times, occurred yesterday, on the outside of the gallery of the Senate, just after I had closed my letter. During the speech of Senator Iveson, of Georgia, or rather during that portion of it in which he made reference to Douglas, an Illinois Democrat, sitting in the gallery, proceeded to berate Iveson, to some of his companions, as a "damned nigger-driver." A few moments after, he was tapped on the shoulder by a gentleman, who requested his presence without the galleries, when the following colloquy ensued:

Stranger, (to the Illinois Democrat).—"What did you mean, sir, by using the expression, 'damned nigger-driver,' a few moments ago?"

Illinois Democrat—"I don't know that it is any business of your's, sir, what I meant. My remarks were not addressed to you."

Stranger—"You spoke of Iveson as a damned nigger-driver, sir; and I am an owner of niggers, and live in Alabama."

Illinois Democrat—"Well, sir, if you own some niggers, I suppose you drive them, don't you?"

Alabama—"That is none of your business, sir. I consider myself insulted by the remark that you made, and here's my card, (taking out his card and extending a finely engraved piece of enameled card) give me your's if you please."

Illinois Democrat—"I don't want your card, sir. I live in Illinois, and we don't recognize the code out there. I don't know anything about your cards, and I don't want any of them!"

Alabama—"Well, sir, I want an apology or satisfaction for your remark."

Illinois Democrat—"If you want any satisfaction out of me, you can have it. Here's just as good a place, and as good a chance, as ever you will get."

Alabama—"That is not the way gentlemen do in my country. I want the satisfaction known among gentlemen."

Illinois Democrat—"It's the way gentlemen do in my country, and all other kinds of people too; and I say to you, if you want any satisfaction out of me, now's your time, and here's the place. Right here, sir."

At this time, a large crowd had gathered about both parties, while they stood for a moment eyeing each other, and neither one saying a word. The Alabama was at the end of his string. To draw a knife or pistol, wouldn't do. To pitch into his stalwart antagonist, wouldn't do either; and so he stood upon his point of honor. Happily for all concerned, his friends here interfered, and relieved him, and saved the credit of all concerned, and especially the National Capitol, from a disgraceful row.

The Land beyond the Mountains.
The little child was dying. His weary limbs were racked with pain no more.

The flush was fading from his thin cheeks, and the fever that had been for weeks drying up his blood, was now cooling rapidly under the touch of the icy hand that was upon him.

There were sounds and tokens of bitter but suppressed grief in that dim chamber, for the dying boy was one very dear to many hearts.

They knew that he was departing, and the thought was hard to bear; but they tried to command their feelings that they might not disturb the last moments of their darling.

The father and mother, and the kind physician stood beside Eddy's bed, and watched his heavy breathing. He had been silent for some time, and appeared to sleep. They thought it might be thus that he would pass away; but suddenly his blue eyes opened wide and clear, and a beautiful smile broke over his features.

He looked upward and forward first, then turning his eyes upon his mother's face said in sweet voice:

"Mother, what is the name of the beautiful country that I see beyond the mountains—the high mountains?"

"I see nothing my child," said the mother; "there are no mountains in the sight of our house."

"Look there, dear mother," said the child, pointing upwards, "you are the mountains. Can you see them now?" he asked in tones of the greatest astonishment, as his mother shook her head.

"They are near me now—so large and high and behind them the country looks so beautiful and the people are so happy—there are no sick children there! Papa, can you not see beyond the mountains? Tell me the name of the land."

The parents glanced at each other, and with united voice replied, "The land you see is Heaven, is it not my child."

"Yes, it is Heaven. I thought that must be the name. O, let me go—but how shall I cross those mountains? Father, will you not carry me? take me in your arms and carry me, for they call me from the other side, and I must go."

There was not a dry eye in the chamber, and upon every heart there fell a solemn awe, as if the curtain which concealed its mysteries was about to be withdrawn.

"O, mother—O, father, do not cry, but come with me and cross the mountains—O come!" and thus he entreated with a strength and earnestness which astonished all.

The chamber was filled with wondering, awe-stricken friends. At length he turned to his mother, with a face beaming with rapturous delight and stretching out his little arms for a last embrace, he cried, "Good-bye, mother; I am going; but don't you be afraid—the strong man has come to carry me over the mountains."

Those were his parting words. Upon his mother's breast he breathed his last and they laid the little fair body down again upon the pillows, and closed the lids over the beautiful blue eyes, over which the mist of death had gathered heavily, and bowing by the bedside they prayed with submissive, but bleeding hearts, and said, "The Lord gave, and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

EFFECT OF SECESSION ON SOUTHERN TRADE.—By a private letter from a gentleman occupying a prominent position among the business men of Louisiana, we are informed that the effect of the secession agitation is becoming disastrous in that quarter. As an instance of the extent of the depression, the writer mentions the fact that the business of the New Orleans, Jackson & Great Northern Railroad, (the principal road of that section,) has, during the past few weeks dwindled to "almost nothing." Other instances of prostration of trade are given by the same writer.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

A compound remedy, designed to be the most efficient alterative that can be made. It is a concentrated extract of Para Sarsaparilla, combined with other substances of still greater alterative power as to afford an effective antidote for the diseases Sarsaparilla is reputed to cure. It is believed that such a remedy is wanted by those who suffer from Strumous complaints, and that one which will accomplish their cure must prove of immense service to this large class of our afflicted fellow-citizens. How completely this compound will do it has been proved by experiment on many of the worst cases to be found of the following complaints:

SCHROPELA AND SCROFULOUS COMPLAINTS, Eruptions and Eruptions, Itch, Urticaria, Pimples, Blisters, Tumors, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Syphilis and Syphilitic Affections, Mercurial Discharge, Dropsy, Neuralgia on the Face, Rheumatism, Dizziness, Headache, Stomach, Liver, and Kidney, Dropsy, St. Anthony's Fire, and indeed the whole class of complaints arising from Impurity of the Blood.

This compound will be found a great promoter of health, when taken in the spring, to expel the foul humors which festinate in the blood at that season of the year. By the timely expulsion of them many ranking disorders are nipped in the bud. Many persons, from the endurance of foul eruptions and ulcers, and sores, through which the system will strive to rid itself of corruption, if not assisted to do this through the natural channels of the body by an alterative medicine. Cleanse out the vitiated blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in pimples, eruptions, or sores; cleanse it when you find it is clogged and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it whenever it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Even where no particular disorder is felt, people enjoy better health, and live longer, by cleansing the blood. Keep the blood healthy, and you will keep the system healthy. Sarsaparilla, however, does much, the reputation of accomplishing these ends. But the world has been egregiously deceived by preparations of it, partly because the drug does not all the virtue that is claimed for it, but more because many preparations, pretending to be concentrated extracts of it, contain but little of the virtue of Sarsaparilla, or any thing else.

During late years the public have been misled by large bodies, pretending to give a quart of Extract of Sarsaparilla for one dollar. Most of these have been frauds upon the sick, for they not only contain little, if any, Sarsaparilla, but often no purgative at all, and hence, bitter and painful, disappointment has followed the use of the various extracts of Sarsaparilla which flood the market, until the name itself is justly despised, and has become synonymous with imposture and fraud.

We call this compound Sarsaparilla, and intend to supply such a remedy as shall rescue the name from the load of obloquy which rests upon it. And we think we have ground for believing it has virtue, which no other can equal. By the ordinary run of the diseases it is intended to cure. In order to secure their complete eradication from the system, the remedy should be judiciously taken according to directions on the bottle.

PREPARED BY DR. J. C. AYER & CO.
LOWELL, MASS.
Price, 50 cents per Bottle; 100 bottles for $5.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has won for itself such a reputation for the cure of every variety of Throat and Lung Complaint, that it is entirely unnecessary for us to recount the evidence of its virtue, wherever it has been employed. As it has long been in constant use throughout this section, we need not do more than assure the people its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do for their relief all it has ever been found to do.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
FOR THE CURE OF
Constipation, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dropsy, Piles, Hemorrhoids, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Women, Gonorrhea, as a Dinner Pill, and for Purifying the Blood.
